My childhood was a paradise full of innocence. I remember a dream of dense trees, long grass and many ant houses. My childhood was spent in one of the many forests of Africa and at the same time it became my dream. I was the son of an elephant whose work was to pull the greatest tree out of the forest. My father was running when he clashed with the trees. Then he went back, rolled out his huge ears, raised his tail out of rage, bent up his trunk and burst forth like a bat out of hell towards the tree. He implanted his ivory tusk like a knife into the wooden flesh of the tree, enwrapped it with his trunk, and pulled it out making a loud sound. The tree was plucked out with a block of mud containing the tree's deeply set roots. Water burst out from the hole that previously contained the roots of the tree. My mother came along after the loud bang. My father commanded her to bathe in the water of the hole made by his power. As she bathed, the destroyed tree with its dark bark and its vanquished surrender, looked at my mother.

My father was a king beyond comparison. Even lions were afraid of him. I was the only one who did not feel afraid of him. I felt that my small block was the developing image of his huge one. Moreover, I know that his power would decline when he reached old age. At that time, it would be brought into my body. My father was able to defeat everything but happily he let me conquer him while he was laughing. Then one day my father died...

He felt that he was going to die ...And before he started his journey into the elephants' graveyard, he summoned me and said, "I am going to leave and I will not come back again."

I asked him, "Why will you not return?"

He said, "Do not ask me such silly questions. Look, this may be the last time I talk to you ...So listen carefully to my words." "I listen to you father but you have a muddy mood today," I Commented. He said, "It is the end that makes me muddy. My power is running out of my body... I have lived as an upright elephant and I am going to die also as an upright one."

"I do not understand you my father," I said.

He continued, "I did not employ my power to serve the purpose of an aggressor ...This is righteousness in which we believe." My father went on to say, "I did not do injustice to anyone, I did not strike anyone, I did not pull out a tree without a clear reason as when it stood as an obstacle on my way. Really, I feel satisfied with myself, but I saw a strange dream about you last night. Do not ask me what it is? Just remember these words as you will face a situation in which you have to choose. When such a moment takes place, you must choose righteousness. "
