Theory of Fact: I Love therefore I Am (Celestial Spieces) (Volume 1) Mr Yuri N. Barzov

It is a book about two older teenagers who are living thousands kilometers away from each other in underdeveloped countries in the future 30-50 years from now. High speed communications have created new opportunities for them. They are falling in love with each other while performing remote drone missions on distant planets. They have to challenge death itself to save their love. A collection of outstanding people, both friends and enemies gather around our lovers. Together they may even change the future of human race. Are they opening to humanity new horizons or are they bringing it to the brinkmanship of extinction? All scientific concepts and technologies used in this book already exist today. The main idea of the book is inspired by Russian philosopher Genrikh Fyodorovich Khrustov.
